

Abstract of the Disclosure

Provided is a digital camera having a recording medium and a communication interface. The digital camera transmits data files on the recording medium to a second device, such as a computer, through the communication interface, or receives data files stored on a computer through the communication interface for storage of the received data files on the recording medium. On a display panel, the digital camera displays an initialization state of the communication interface, a transceiving (transmitting or receiving) state of the data files, and an electrical connection state between the camera and the computer.

5